

Jupiter Ascending

Jupiter Ascending

Semantic Summary

Jupiter Ascending is a small-scale UK YouTube channel producing right-wing and anti-establishment political commentary focused on immigration, cultural grievance, and critiques of progressive politics. The channel's name — borrowed from the 2015 Wachowski film — makes it exceptionally difficult to track through conventional search, as Hollywood SEO dominance buries the political content. This low digital footprint places the channel on the periphery of the documented UK far-right YouTube ecosystem rather than at its centre alongside higher-profile figures like Charlie Veitch or BasedWelshman. The channel's content — reaction videos, immigration commentary, and anti-"woke" material — sits squarely within the broader British populist right's thematic repertoire, but its small subscriber base and lack of confirmed cross-platform presence suggest limited organisational ties to the interlocking networks of Tommy Robinson associates, auditor collectives, or street-level activist groups like Raise the Colours. No specific affiliations with known far-right organisations or figures have been documented, and no arrests, legal incidents, or major media investigations had surfaced as of mid-2026, making this one of the more obscure and difficult-to-characterise entities in the landscape.

Overview

Jupiter Ascending is a UK-based YouTube channel producing right-wing and anti-establishment political commentary. The channel's name is borrowed from the 2015 Wachowski film, but the content is unrelated to the movie — it focuses on UK politics, immigration, and cultural grievances common to the British populist right.

Important note: The channel should not be confused with the Warner Bros. official trailer channel or the film's studio channel, which dominate search results. The right-wing commentary channel appears to use a different handle and has a smaller footprint online.

Search Results

Web and social media searches for "Jupiter Ascending" in the UK right-wing context return few direct results. The channel name is heavily SEO-dominated by the Hollywood film, making it difficult to surface via standard search. The channel appears to be a smaller operation compared to others on this list (Charlie Veitch, BasedWelshman), with modest subscriber numbers. Content typically includes reaction videos to news stories, commentary on immigration policy, and criticism of progressive politics.

Notable Content

- Commentary on UK immigration and asylum policy
- Reactions to mainstream media coverage
- Cultural grievance content ("woke" culture, identity politics)

Controversies

No specific arrests, legal incidents, or major media investigations have been documented in connection with this channel as of mid-2026. This does not mean none have occurred — only that they have not surfaced in mainstream reporting or HOPE not hate / ARC monitoring. The channel's low profile and name collision with the Hollywood film make it difficult to track.

Social Media

No confirmed X/Twitter, Facebook, or other social media handles could be identified under this name. The right-wing commentary channel may use a different handle or branding that differs from the channel display name.
