Family businesses and staycation parents pay cost of benefits bill, say Tories

LABOUR TOURIST TAX WILL HAMMER SEASIDE B&Bs

BY MARTYN BROWN
Political Editor

LABOUR'S planned tourist tax on overnight stays could crush family-run seaside B&Bs, a senior Tory has warned.

Shadow Chancellor Andrew Griffith said that parents with school-age children may rethink a staycation if costs soar at peak holiday times.

He added: "Labour needs the money, because

REDS HARDMAN GRAEME SLAMS PREM FOOTIE ACES

SOUNESS: Today's stars are big softies

BUT JASMINE IS VERY TOUGH

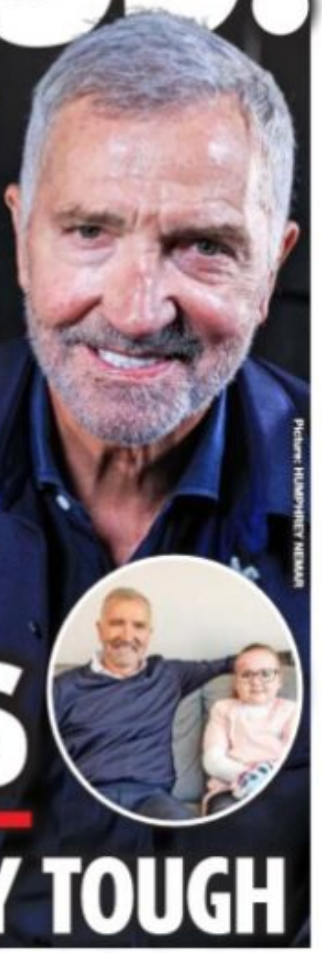

■ by ED EASTON

FOOTIE'S Graeme Souness reckons today's Prem stars are softies.

But the ex-LFC enforcer finds it hard not to cry when he sees the pain "tough" kids like Jasmine Ritchie, pictured, suffer from a rare skin disease.

He's doing the Three Peaks Challenge to raise £500k for charity DEBRA.

Daily Star

(5) BYLINES:
BY ED EASTON

> ⚠ Byline verification note: the first `vision_analyze` passes on the Star cover read the surname as "ED BASTON" (twice); a tight zoom crop of the byline line read "ED EASTON", and external verification confirms Ed Easton is a real Daily Star reporter (author slug `edward-easton`, bylines on dailystar.co.uk). The "BASTON" reads are discarded as vision misreads; no such journalist exists. The Express `_print cover via Newsworks_` line is the source of truth for the edition read.

Authors

Daily Express

- Martyn Brown (Political Editor) — cover story byline Bio: Political Editor of the Daily Express, covering politics and foreign affairs from Westminster and a parliamentary lobby correspondent since 2010. Joined the Express as a news reporter in 2007 and rose to political correspondent, then spent three years in Myanmar (covering the country's first free general election in 2015 and the Rohingya genocide in 2017) before returning as deputy political editor. Promoted to political editor in November 2024, succeeding Sam Lister. Controversies: None found in public-record searches — no IPSO rulings, corrections or press rows naming him. (Name-mismatch note: the Wikipedia entry "Martyn Brown" is a British former diver, and a separate Martyn Brown was a UK video-game director who died in 2024; both discarded as non-matches.) Sources: Express journalist profile, Press Gazette: Who are the UK's political editors?, The Press Awards — Martyn Brown

Daily Mirror

- Lizzy Buchan — cover story byline Bio: Political Editor of the Daily Mirror, overseeing the paper's Westminster team. Announced as permanent political editor on 18 December 2024 after a spell as interim political editor (following John Stevens' departure), having previously been the Mirror's deputy online political editor and deputy political editor. Joined the Mirror in 2020 as a political correspondent from The Independent; has covered politics since 2017, before which she reported on Parliament for PA Media and worked at Cambridge News and The Scotsman. Incoming chair of the Westminster Lobby (as of December 2025). Controversies: None found in public-record searches — no IPSO rulings, corrections or scandals naming her. Sources: Mirror author page, Press Gazette: Lizzy Buchan appointed Mirror political editor, Press Gazette: Lobby journalists 'furious' as No 10 scraps afternoon press briefing
- Ashley Cowburn — cover story byline Bio: Deputy Political Editor of the Daily Mirror, based in Parliament/Westminster and covering UK politics; previously a political correspondent at The Independent. Named a winner in MHP's 30 To Watch: Young Journalist Awards in 2019 (while at The Independent) for work covering UK politics. Controversies: None found in public-record searches — no IPSO rulings or corrections naming him. (Name-junk note: searches surface unrelated "Ashley Cowburn" hits from cricket archives; no journalist-relevant material.) Sources: Mirror author page, Muck Rack profile, MHP 30 To Watch — Journalism winners

Daily Star

- Ed Easton — cover story byline Bio: Daily Star reporter and football writer, also credited as "Edward Easton"; his Star archive mixes news features (Hells Angels investigation, Bayeux Tapestry, competitive bricklaying) with football and Fantasy Premier League coverage. Self-described on X as a London-based football journalist and podcast producer who has worked with Mirror Football, Daily Star Sport and Football London. The Star publishes no staff bio for him. Controversies: The Star's 27 May 2026 front page "LADYBOYS IN BLUE", bylined Ed Easton, was built on an AI-generated image of Thai police officers in drag costumes arresting a suspect — the paper quietly updated the story online after the hoax was exposed (the Telegraph, Sun, Mirror, Express, GB News and New York Post also ran it). No IPSO ruling found. (Name-mismatch note: Wikipedia "Edward Easton" is an American politician, d. 2019; Muck Rack "Ed Easton Jr." is a Kansas City-based US sports journalist — both discarded.) Sources: Daily Star author archive (Edward Easton), The New World: Daily Star falls for lie of Thai AI, Ed Easton on X
