(Mike Ward appears in a TV-section promotion, not as a byline.)

Authors

Daily Express

- Hanna Geissler — Health Editor, cover story byline Bio: Health Editor of the Daily Express, promoted from health reporter (she joined the paper as a news reporter, and had been there over three years at the time of the promotion). Writes on UK health news, particularly the NHS and medical research, with occasional foreign reporting — including the 2023 Turkey earthquake and the East Africa hunger crisis. NCTJ-trained at Kingston University in London. Controversies: None found in public-record searches. No IPSO ruling names her: the IPSO rulings search API returned an empty result set for "Hanna Geissler". The Express publishes no journalist-level corrections index (`/corrections-clarifications` and `/corrections` both 404). Nearest thing to a press row is her role as a signatory to the March 2024 industry open letter urging police to break the cycle of online abuse of women journalists — she was a named participant, not a subject of complaint. Her paper's "Give Us Our Last Rights" assisted-dying campaign, which she fronted as health editor, was shortlisted at the British Journalism Awards. Sources: Express journalist profile — "Hanna Geissler is Health Editor at the Express... NCTJ trained at Kingston University", Talking Biz News — "Daily Express names Geissler health editor", Muck Rack profile, Press Gazette — industry letter on abuse of women journalists (named signatory), Press Gazette — Express assisted-dying campaign shortlisted, IPSO rulings search — empty result for "Hanna Geissler"

Daily Mirror

- Graham Hiscott — Business Editor on the cover (author page: Business and Consumer Editor) Bio: The Daily Mirror's Business and Consumer Editor — "Head of Business and Consumer" in the paper's own description — covering banks, energy, food and oil companies plus personal finance, with a consumer-rights framing. Educated at the University of Central Lancashire and based in London; an award-winning business journalist, a previous London Press Club Consumer Journalist of the Year winner and a shortlisted nominee. Long-serving Mirror business byline, cited as far back as 2013 in Wikipedia's Vince Cable article. Controversies: None found in public-record searches. The IPSO rulings search API returned an empty result set for "Graham Hiscott", and the Mirror's own corrections-and-clarifications index carries zero mentions of his name. His coverage (bank profits, Amazon's UK tax affairs, Next equal-pay litigation) has drawn criticism of the subjects rather than of him. Sources: Mirror author profile — bio and current title, LinkedIn — "Award winning Business and Consumer Editor… previous London Press Club Consumer Journalist of the Year winner", MHP Group interview — "As Head of Business and Consumer at the Daily Mirror", IPSO rulings search — empty result for "Graham Hiscott"

Daily Star

- Kate Nelson — cover story byline Bio: No published professional bio found. The Daily Star author page carries a name and article list only, with no bio block (a recurring quirk of the title's author pages). A Muck Rack profile matching this byline describes her as a "freelance journalist and editor; qualified KG Hypnobirthing trainer" — so she appears to work freelance rather than as Star staff, though her Star showbiz and news bylines are frequent (e.g. a co-bylined 10 Aug 2026 Brad Pitt story). Her LinkedIn is a "freelance media professional" profile carrying a recommendation from the Star's associate editor Tom Hutchison. Treat the freelance description as probable, not established — the Muck Rack outlet list omits the Star even though the profile hosts today's Truss article. Controversies: None found in public-record searches. The IPSO rulings search API returned an empty result set for "Kate Nelson", and the Daily Star's corrections-and-clarifications index carries zero mentions of her name. Note the same-name traps when checking further: Wikipedia's "Kate Nelson" is an American retired rhythmic gymnast, and there are unrelated US journalists of the same name. Sources: Daily Star author page (name + article list, no bio), Cover story byline — "Liz Truss ignores one thing she's famous for…", Muck Rack profile — self-description, LinkedIn — freelance media professional, recommended by the Star's associate editor, IPSO rulings search — empty result for "Kate Nelson"

Verification notes

- Bylines: pipeline originally logged "Hannah Geissler" (misspelt) and "Graham Hiscott Business" (job title bled into the name field). Corrected to Hanna Geissler / Graham Hiscott against the papers' own article bylines and author pages: `journalist/123250/Hanna-Geissler`, `authors/graham-hiscott`, `authors/kate-nelson`. Alternate slugs `graham-heslott`, `graham-hislott`, `kate-melton` all 404.
- Story corroboration: each author page carried that day's splash — Express (end-of-life care £200m fund), Mirror (HSBC/bank windfall tax), Star (Truss book/lettuce). The Mirror cover job title "Business Editor" is what's printed; the author page's current title is "Business and Consumer Editor".
- Wikipedia: no en-wiki article for Hanna Geissler or Graham Hiscott (REST summary 404). "Kate Nelson" resolves to an American rhythmic gymnast — wrong person, discarded. Wikipedia's Vince Cable article does cite a 2013 Graham Hiscott Mirror byline.
