

Rikki Doolan

Rikki Doolan

Semantic Summary

Rikki Doolan is a pentecostal pastor at Spirit Embassy church in Tottenham, North London, who has emerged as the most prominent Christian nationalist figure within Tommy Robinson's inner circle, forging an unprecedented bridge between charismatic Christianity and the UK far-right. Best known for leading Robinson to Christ while Robinson was imprisoned in 2025, Doolan has become a fixture at Unite the Kingdom rallies — speaking from the main stage, leading prayers and worship, and claiming "hundreds of thousands" received salvation at these events. His signature declaration that "Jesus Christ supports border control" encapsulates the fusion of pentecostal theology with anti-immigration politics that defines his ministry. Doolan organised the "Put Christ back into Christmas" carol concert with Robinson in December 2025, baptised Robinson associates in the River Jordan in Israel alongside fellow Christian right figure Ceirion Dewar, and defended the UTK Christmas event on BBC Radio 4. The Guardian describes him as a "Christian nationalist pastor" and one of the "worst offenders" at the May 2026 UTK rally. His Spirit Embassy church blends Zimbabwean-origin pentecostalism with prophetic declarations over Britain, NAR-adjacent revivalist eschatology, and attacks on Islam, immigration, and LGBT+ rights. Doolan represents the most developed theological arm of the UK far-right's attempt to co-opt Christian imagery and legitimacy, providing spiritual cover for Robinson's political project.

Rikki Doolan is a Pentecostal minister at Spirit Embassy church in Tottenham, North London, who has become Tommy Robinson's personal pastor and one of the most influential Christian nationalist figures in the UK far right. He claims to have led Robinson to Christ while the activist was imprisoned in 2025, a conversion that became a central motif of Robinson's rebranding and was covered by the BBC, The Guardian, and Premier Christianity. Doolan is a regular main-stage speaker at Unite the Kingdom rallies, where The Guardian described him as one of the "worst offenders." His signature line — "Jesus Christ supports border control" — encapsulates the fusion of Pentecostal worship with anti-immigration politics. He organises mass baptisms in Israel alongside Bishop Ceirion Dewar and runs "Put Christ back into Christmas" events with Robinson. His YouTube channel (20K subscribers, 436 videos) and Instagram (110K followers) broadcast a blend of gospel music, political sermons, and prophetic declarations over Britain. Doolan's British-Zimbabwean background and NAR-adjacent theology position him within both the UK's African Pentecostal diaspora and the global Christian nationalist movement. His pastoral relationship with Robinson is the single most important religious legitimisation of the British far right — transforming a convicted fraudster and street brawler into a born-again Christian nationalist figurehead. Category: Christian Nationalist / Pentecostal Pastor / Tommy Robinson Inner Circle Status: Active Real Name: Rikki Doolan Location: Tottenham, North London YouTube: @realrikkidoolan (~20K subscribers, 436 videos) Instagram: @realrikkidoolan (~110K followers) TikTok: @rikkidoolanreal Church: Spirit Embassy (Tottenham, London) Monikers: "Christian nationalist pastor" (The Guardian), "Tommy Robinson's pastor"
