Background

Kezza operates a Dover-based splinter group called "Kezza's Pink Patriots." The group appears to be a breakaway or splinter faction, though the parent organisation it split from is unclear. Dover's position as a frontline Channel port makes it a focal point for anti-immigration activism, and this group likely organises protests, patrols, or vigils around the Dover coastline and port area.

The "Pink Patriots" branding is unusual — the colour pink is not typically associated with far-right or nationalist groups, and may be a distinguishing or ironic branding choice. No further detail is available from open-source research.
